MAN CLAIMED HE WAS A STRIKE BREAKER AND TRIED TO GET RIOTERS TO KILL HIM.

(By Publishers' Press.) CHICAGO, Aug. 24.-Among six suisides or attempted suicides reported to the police yesterday, the methods adopted by Frank Foley, were the most elaborate and unusual. Foley obtained employment in the stockyards, then drove through the strike district telling all whom he saw that he was a strike breaker. His hope that he would be attacked by rioters and killed, was not realized, and in the afternoon he quit his job, and in a pawn shop shot himself in the left side with a revolver which he pretended to be about to purchase. Even then his desire to die was thwarted, for he inflicted only a flesh wound. Foley said that his determination to die resulted from a quarrel with his wife.
